Title: Building a University Community that Supports Student Mental Health

Presenters: Tara H. Scarborough, Psy.D., MHSA

Executive Director, Health and Wellness Director, Counseling and Psychological Services (CAPS) -Division of Student Affairs University of Cincinnati

Calisha Brooks, Ph.D.

Mental Health Consultant, Counseling and Psychological Services (CAPS), University of Cincinnati

With the increase in mental health utilization in higher education, building a community that supports students in new and innovative ways is essential. There is an increasing need for mental well-being education and peer support, which must be built with all members of the community, faculty, staff, and students. Several initiatives that build a supportive environment and allow students to lead mental well-being programs will be presented.

Participants will:

- Learn ways to develop relationships within a collaborative leadership framework
- Understand the importance of student engagement to create high impact inclusive programs.
- Become familiar with several student-led initiatives
- Gain an understanding of steps that they can take to build a supportive community at their higher education institution

Event Time:

September 9, 2020

12:00PM Eastern Time
(US and Canada)
