Effective Strategies to Build Campus-Community Partnerships with Cecilia Amoakohene, Community Partnership Coordinator, The Centre for Innovation in Campus Mental Health(CICMH)Toronto,ON

The creation of partnerships between campuses and community organizations can help to ease organization strain and support the work of meeting the increased, more complex mental health needs of students through combined knowledge and resources. But once these partnerships are formed, they need to be nurtured and supported by all involved. This webinar will give participants the knowledge and skills to maintain intentional, student-focused partnerships aimed at supporting mental health on campus. The webinar will also introduce participants to methods for engaging students effectively and working with non-traditional partners.

Webinar Objectives

- Describe the importance of maintaining intentionally built partnerships
- Explain the importance of utilizing the ideal form(s) of engagement based on the type of partnership being pursued and the partner(s) involved
- Recognize that partnerships with non-traditional partners can have positive benefits for students as well as all partners at the table
