Target Audience

Prevention practitioners who are using home-grown prevention programs or have adapted evidence-based prevention strategies to meet their community needs

Description

Join the Ohio Education Research Center and the College of Social Work for a one-day convening designed to bridge the gap between community practice and data. If you have developed a local prevention program or adapted strategies for your community, this event will connect you directly with researchers and evaluators who are committed to strengthening evidence-building in Ohio. Together, you will build partnerships that support program evaluation and documentation, setting the stage for your program's future inclusion in an Ohio-based registry of effective prevention and early intervention programs.
